TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 4

Funeral of Brigham Young. SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 2, 1877. - The dead body of Brigham Young, late President of the Mermon community and so edled Prophet of the Latter Day Szints, was buried to day, in accordance with the programme previously arranged by the priesthood and the family. The crowd which appeared in the streets of Salt Lake City yesterday was further increased this terenoon by the arrival of hundreds and thousands of wagons of every possible description, all of them containing men, women and children, nearly all of whom were most incongruously attired. Handreds of these visitors from the remote settlements encamped last night in open lots in the city proper, on the foothills of the mountains and in the suburbs, and to night the same scenes are being repeated on a larger scale. There were also the railroad trains. each of which arrived loaded down with pis sengers of every grade and of both sexes, so that the multitude, though great this morning, is an immense one this evening, owing to the late arrival of distant visitors who could not reach the city in time for the funeral.

Early this forenoon the new Tabernacle, where the body had lain in state all of yesterday and during the night of Saturday, was approached by dense masses of Mormons, whose curiosity, it was evident, far outstripped every sure where it stands, is thickly littered with large, rough granite blocks, intended to be in time put into the walls of the neighboring new Temple, which has been in contemplation for many years. On these gigantic flat stones groups of Saints disposed themselves, looking as unlike saints and as like figures in early daguerrotypes of the lower classes of people in the agricultural shires of England and Wales as it is possible to imagine. In their couversation could be frequently heard the dialects of Kent and Yorkshire and all sorts of peculiar Scotch and Scandinavian idioms, mixed with Bible Christian names, with which they constantly addressed their children, such as Nephi Levi, Zepania, Noah, Aaron, Ruth and Naomi The dresses of the women were a study for an artist, being evidently culled from the wardrobes of great, great grandmothers in five or was present, and the fashions belonged to almost every epoch since the days of Josephine and the First Empire. The men were, on the other hand, arrayed in garments of no special fashion. Some wore broad cloth, but the great at the crowd thus assembled it was curious to see the vivid colors displayed, while huge sun bonnets on the heads of the country women loomed up here and there among the sea of heads like the wagon tops on the wide prairie. In the breeze fluttered a multitude of streaming ribbons, which waved about like the leaves on forest trees. It was curious to see the amaz ing specimens of shoes worn by these settlement people, and their children were dull and stupid, resembling dolls more than human beings, so dazed and wonder stricken did they appear to be. The Tabernacle is as great a coriosity as anything else in this curious city. Brigham himself devised it and superintended its construction, and any stranger can see that he could not have had the aid of a sane architect while pursuing these labors. It is familiar to many who were never in Utah as a huge building, built in the form of a complete oval, pictures of the edifice baving been scattered far and wide. I need only say here that the major axis of the oval is 250 feet long and the minor axis 150 feet wide. Its roof is round, covered with weather beaten shingles, and it has long been named by, and known to, the Gentiles by the euphonious title of the "Turtle." The lower part, for the support of the dome, consists of a succession of pillars of red cut sandstone, each about six feet square and ten feet high, all around the building. Along the sides are do double doors, placed between the rillars, and at the eastern end a heavy wooden partition. The building is, in fact, a vast framework, plastered within and raised along the centre sixty five feet above the floor. There is not a trace of the beautiful or the impressive about it. It is simply a vast pile, awkwardly put together, would have sufficed to provide the same room and accommodations in some other shape. As a work of art it is a monstresity of the most repellent type. Acoustically it is a complete failure. In the auditorium cobody can hear distinetly what is said by the speakers on the stand, but it has a mammoth organ only second in size, though greatly inferior in tone and compass, to the grand organ in the Boston Mu sic Hall. It is capable of scating 8,000 people. Within an hour after the doors of the Tabernacle were opened to-day it was filled on the floor and in the galleries by 15,000 persons. The interior of the edifice was decorated from the main floor to the ceiling with festoons and wreaths of evergreeus and artificial flowers, while the organ and the seats set apart for the members of the higher priesthood and apostles were heavily draped in mourning. At noon the stands placed in front of the great organ and choir were occupied by the general authorities of the Church, among whom was conepicuously noticeable John W. Young, the First Counsellor and favorite son of Brigham, who thus took his official place in the Tabernacle, deserting his appropriate seat among the mourners of the Young family. The south platform was occupied by the City Council, the Glee Club and band. West of them was the High Council of this Stake of Zion and the visiting High Council from different parts of the Territory. The north side of the platform was occupied by the bishops and their counsellors of this Stake and visiting hishops and their counsellors. Immediately in front of the stand, in the body of the building, ten benches were reserved for Brigham Young's family who, in due time, en tered the Tabernacle in procession and manifested but few signs of grief as they did so. According to the official organ of the Mormon Church, the Descret News, President Young | the lid can be made crowning. was the father of fifty-six children. He has that can be conveniently, and the male members that can be conveniently, and the male members. left behind him seventeen wives, sixteen living sons and twenty eight daughters. Nearly sill of these wives and children were present.

Far back in the rear of this numerous family liberty to wear them. of the deceased Mormon leader scats were reserved, and their localities denoted by sizoboards raised above the heads of the multitude, for the High Priests, the Elders, Querums of Seventies and the members of the lesser price: men occupying these positions of power and in flaence in this community.

Gazing on this mass of Mormon Church au thorities it was impossible for any intelligent repulsion at the positive vulguity, ignorance

Outside those reservations of space-for the munity, a great and misce aneous host of parti-colored saint; crammed all other space in the huge edifice, below on the main floor and aloft in the galleries. This mass of human beings was a spectacle in itself, for never before in the history of the Tabernacle has such an audience been present within its walls. There may have been as large a crowd inside the building in times past, but never has it contained so many dignitaries at one time, nor has there been such a surging multitude without the doors vainly seeking for admission where there could be none vouchsafed. Such a multitude stood without the gates to day, and, finding entrance impossible, quietly stood waiting for the cere monies, such as they were, to come to an end. In the midst of the great concourse, and direcely in front of the seats occupied by the Twelve Apostles, stood the coffie, divested of its white merino covering. It was raised upon a high catafalque and surmounted by a wreath of flowers. Precisely at twelve o'clock the great organ began to tremble and groan, and a few micutes after the choir arose and broke forth in a votive hymo. The ceremonies, which were devoid of excitement, as was acticipated from the reading of a rumored clause in Brigham's will, and of anything like elequence or pathos, then proceeded.

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Franklin D. Richards, a tall, straight, fine looking man of the Quorum of the Twelve Aposiles. In the course of his appeal he thanked God that he had served on earth a sucessor of Jesus Christ (meaning that he had been a faithful servant to Brigham Young.) and he meurned that the brethren were called upon to part with one of the noblest sons of God's royal family. He urged the Lord in paricular to remember Brigham's two sons, John W. and Brigham, jr., who have stepped forward and are partakers of the apostleship. He also prayed for the preservation of the Lord's people from any manner of schism or discord, and for scattered Israel in every part of the house of Judah and the Ten Tribes wherever they may be. He thanked the Lord that, while multitudes elsewhere were falling by war, famine and pestilence, that here in Utah there was peace and plenty. He prayed that the Lord might establish the Mormons in strength, that they might vanquish their coemies.

George Q. Cannon, the plausible and wellknown Congressional Delegate, then directed a yan to be sung, after which Elder Daniel H. Wells, Lieutenant General of the Mormon militia and Brigham's second counsellor, arose in all his six feet and over of ugliness and resix foreign countries. Every shade of color pulsive holiness and proclaimed to the people that he had let fall a silent tear (which was also imperceptible) to relieve his aching heart. This was the Mormon soldier's tribute. Another of the Twelve Apostles, Elder Wilford Woodruff, a small, shilly shally looking majority were dressed in home spun, much of man, followed with a dreary and fulsome but it fresh from the Prophet's factories. Looking spiritless laudation of Brigham delivered in a monotonous tone. The burden of his remarks was an appeal to the priesthood to continue his work. He further said that Brigham's great desire in the last year of his life was to creet temples throughout the land of Zion unto the name of the Lord. It is as well to say here that the moneys already extracted from the Morenous in America and abroad for temples to be built in Utah already amount to millions of dollars, but only one temple has been completed at the extreme end of the territory, the one at St. George, 350 mile south of Salt Lake City. The great Salt Lake Temple has hardly risen to its second story window sills. Woodruff said, in answer to the questionings of the fanatical saints, who, it appears, had wondered, under teachings of Mormon doctrines, how Brigham Young could die at all, that if ever a man could have been saved by faith and by prayer Brigham Young would have been with the Saints to-day. "But," said the speaker, "it was not in the power of man to keep him here. I believe that George A. Smith (alluding to Brigham's first councillor, now dead) was kept this side of the vale of the shadow of death for months after he had been called there by the faith and earnest prayers of his friends. When the Lord calls we have to go. When we got word at St. George of his (Smith's) sickness we stopped all business and entered into the Temple with all the elders of Israel and we prayed that he might live, and we spent two days and two nights in our prayer circle up to the time of his death offering up our prayers to the Most High God, as did all Israel throughout the valleys of the mountains. But it was necessary for him to pass away, his work is finished, and I thank God his tears and trials and pain, sickness and afiliction are ended. The tribulations which a man of his capacity and position had been called to pass through were sere upon him, and he needed rest. "This mighty warfare that Joseph Smith and Brigham Young and other men in their day and generation have been called to pass through is, in one sense of the word, weariness of the flesh, but they have been thorough and faithful to the end.' Brastus Snow, a sient built, good looking man of medium weight, and one of the most fanatical of the Twelve Apostles, followed next with an address in a similar strain, in the course of which the speaker alleged that Brigham was the mouth piece of the Almighty. George Q. Canson then arose a second time, and said: Nearly four years ago President Young, in company with a number of elders, wrote their instructions, which they desired to have on record, concerning their funerals. Is is his written request that his instructions oa this subject should be read at the funeral. I will now proceed to read them :-J. Brigham Young, wish my funeral services to be conducted in the following manner:-When I breathe my last I wish my friends to put my body in as clean and wholesome a state as can conveniently be done, and preserve the same for one, two, three or four days, or as long as my body can be preserved in good condition. I want my coffin made of plain one and a quarter redweed boards, not serimped in length but two inches longer than I wou'd measure, and from two to three inches wider than is commonly made for a person of my breadth and size, and deep enough to place me on a little comfortable cotton bed with a good suitable pillow in size and quality. My body dressed in my Temple clothing and laid nicely into my coffin, and the coffin to have the appearance that if I wanted to turn a little to the night or e left I should have plenty of room to do so;

At my interment I wish all my family present to wear no crape on their hats or coats; the families to buy no black bonnets or dresses nor black veils, but if they have them they are at And services may be permitted, as singing and a prayer offered, and if any of my friends wish to say a few words they are desired to do so. And when they close their services to take my remains on a blor and repair to the little burying ground which I have reserved on my hood. All of these seats were occupied by the lot east of the White House on the hill. On the southeast corner of this lot I have a vault built of mason work large enough to receive my cofin, and that they may place in a box if they cheso the same as the coffin-redwood-then thorities it was impossible for any intelligent place rocks over the vault sufficiently large to stranger to repress a feeling of amezoment and cover it, that the earth may be placed over it as fine dry earth as can be had-to cover it until and credulity shown on nearly every lace among the walls of the little cemetery are hid, which will leave me in the southeast corner.

This vault ought to be roofed over with some kind of temporary roof. There let my earthly tabernacio rest in peace and comfort and have a good sleep until the morning of the first resurrection-no crying world mourning with any

I have done my work faithfully and in good faith. I wish this to be read at the funeral, provided that if I should disanguhere in the moun. ta'ns I desire the above directions respecting my place of burial should be observed. But if I should live to get back to the church in Jackson county, Mo., I wish to be buried there.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, Pres. Church of Jesus Christ of latter day saints.
Salt Lake City, Utah Territory, Sunday, Nev. 9, 1873.

George Q Cannon, sf.er reading this remark. able document, continued in a placid manner to harangue the people and the Apostle John Tay-lor, a tall, imposing looking man, followed is a rambling speech. At the conclusion of these proceedings, during which the congregation and the crowd outside preserved the domeanor of persons participating in a colossal pienic or country fair. The meeting broke up and the procession moved from the Tabernacle. It then proceeded to Brigham's private cometery on the hillside to the north ast of his residence. A band of brass pastrum ints, a glee club and the Tabernacle choir moved in advance, next followed the City Council Brigham's employees and his four brothers-Joseph Young, Phineas H. Young, Lorenzo D Young and Edward Young. The body was next borne by the clerks and workmen of the deceased.

Ten of the Twelve Apostles acted as pallbearers. The family and relatives were, of course, the most conspicuous in the procession, and they passed along the street after the remains with averted heads and dressel in sombre garments suitable to the occasion A straggling array of hundreds of the priesthood and thousands of Mormans followed the family, all on feet. N:

vehicles were allowed. The band played a mournful tune as a portion of the procession entered Brigham's private cometery, where, efter a tedious ceremonial under a hot sun, the body was deposited in a pecular mausoleum constructed for it.—Cor. N. Y.

aug 10-tf No. 91 N. Wash. st , Alexa., Va TRUE PICTURE OF WRONG LIFE. A Some of the doctor's patients had been inmates of the insane asylum, many had epileptic fits, some were on the verge of consumption, some were sterile and impetent, and others again were imbecile or demented and unable to take care of themselves-all caused by that life wasting disease spermatorrhos, or nervous exhaustion, resulting from the errors of early youth. These became the dector's patients and were cured. Dr. Kinget's warranted remedies for spermatorrhos, and r his own administration, have effected over one thousand permament cures within the last twelve months. He treats with remarkable success all chronic diseases, from whatever cause, affecting the respiratory, the digestive, the circulatory and the generative organs.
